Pug Characteristics

Pugs do require more attention than other breeds. They are companion animals and will not do well if left alone or crated for long periods. They need to have their facial folds cleaned regularly, their nails trimmed and ears cleaned often. Anal glands need to be emptied as well. If regular maintenance is not performed, the pug will develop infections or other problems. Pugs eyes also need to be watched as they are prone to injury and can easily be scratched. Pugs are sturdy animals for their size, but they are still fragile and can easily be injured during rough play. Please see more information about pugs on our About Pugs page.
